We may receive commissions for purchases from our chosen links. Go San Diego makes claims that are enough to make a person skeptical: Save up to 55 percent on a lot of attractions, it's advertised. It almost sounds too good to believe, so we set out to find out the truth about the smartphone discount pass. We poked, poked, clicked and peeked into the fine print. We even made a spreadsheet to calculate the savings, all so you don't have to. This will help you understand if this is a good idea for your holiday. If you tend to lose things (or forget to take them on a trip), a pass may not be for you. Lost passes are not interchangeable or returnable. Think of Go San Diego as a volume discounter. Pass providers negotiate with local tourist discount attractions and sell them as pass-based packages. You can choose from different types of Go San Diego. The basic version (called all-inclusive) covers all passes' offered attractions for a fixed price, valid for the maximum number of days you choose. Buy more days, and a pass costs more. Build-your-own pass offers fewer attractions and is good 30 days after first use, but you can only choose the attractions you want to visit. The more you choose, the higher the discount. You can also choose from pre-built packages for the most popular attractions. California Explorer Pass that gives you the option of 3, 4 or 5 attractions for one price. Using it is easy. Just take your printed or mobile Go Pass at any included San Diego attraction, present it at the ticket window, and you're in. Once used for the first time, the pass is good for the number of days you've chosen, but it has to be consecutive days. If you skip one because you're tired, you won't get a refund or extension. In addition to a rare multi-day pass, you can visit each attraction only once. A pass will probably save you some money, but for most people it won't be as much as the ads claim. The only way to know for sure: add it up. Only you know what attractions you want to visit and how many you are willing to hurry to pack everything up. A quick way to get all the prices you need for this is to use the Go Select page, where they show current prices. Go San Diego will save money if: Buy a three to five day pass and visit all the big ticket attractions (SeaWorld, Legoland, San Diego Zoo, and Safari Park) or visit three or four smaller attractions a day. Get realistic about how much you can do. Great attractions will each take all day, and some are far away. For other attractions that take less time, there may be significant travel times to come from one to the other. If you pack your schedule too tight and poop too much to finish them all, your savings will fall. Group your activities You can use the rest of your trip to other things. If you stuffed all the activities that are best in San Diego in three days, you could save nearly 40 percent, but you'd be so rushed that you wouldn't have much time to enjoy them. Extend that to a more reasoned five days and you'd save about 20 percent. Take seven instead, do nothing else, and the savings drop to just 5 percent. Of all California's tourist destinations, San Diego has the most high-ticket charging attractions, with five of the first dozen attractions charging more than $50 per adult ticket and three others requiring a ticket. These attractions are why most people visit the city, and if you plan to make them all, you'll probably use your pass a lot. However, not everyone wants to see top sights, and these insights can help you understand all this. Some of the attractions offered may not interest you: For example, if you don't like going to museums, it takes about 20 attractions off the list. If you don't like guided tours, it eliminates another half-dozen. If the list of things you want to do gets too small, a pass might not save you money. However, some people say this has introduced them to enjoy activities they may not have found themselves. And when you're still broken, you'll save on every little thing you do after that. Longer duration passes only include SeaWorld (three days or more). Take a closer look at that long list: You'll find that some attractions aren't in San Diego, but in Anaheim, Orange County or even Hollywood. You have to go there to enjoy them, which may or may not be part of your holiday plan. The museum-hating and dodging holiday breaker, who won't leave San Diego, has two dozen attractions to choose from. Some attractions require reservations: Once you buy a pass, you may need to book some tours. Read all the details so as not to be disappointed. You can't buy a Go San Diego pass at the checkout attractions, so you have to plan ahead. But not too far. You can return unused passes for a full refund a year after your purchase, but why not just wait until you're sure of your travel dates? You can buy the pass online on the Go City website. Buy a digital pass and print it at home or download it to your smartphone. Thank you for telling us! Bristol, located about one block from Horton Plaza and three blocks from gaslamp quarter, is a boutique hotel with 102 rooms. It houses a huge pop art collection, with originals by icons Andy Warhol and Peter Max, on display via an art walk downstairs. On the top floor there is a ballroom with a receding roof for special events. [viator_tour destination=736 type=3-mod] Herb & Wood TripAdvisor Herb & Wood, in Little Italy, is easily one of the best restaurants in San Diego. It occupies a loft-like space with bold art, plush blue booths and a positive vibe. The farm-to-table price here is New American with vegetarian options, and the appetizers are surprising in a good way - they think the pizza is topped with bone marrow and escargot; braised beef belly with calypso beans; or oxal gnocchi. With hip crowds, on-it service and craft cocktails (try gin and lavender), dining here makes for an experience that won't be forgotten anytime soon. TripAdvisor Juniper & Ivy, in Little Italy, is the current IT restaurant in San Diego. The self-styled left bank of cooking presents an adventurous daily menu of creative small plates and signature cocktails. Any day, chef Richard Blais may decide to make mushroom and cheese madeleine with spicy mashed potatoes from the date, or carne cruda asada with quail egg or mushroom orechiette. Dessert could be a damn cake with brittle hazelnuts and hot chocolate. Whatever you order, you can't go wrong - book a seat over the counter to watch chefs come up with these masterpieces, then sit back and enjoy the professional service and trend décor, which includes bright-colored art and exposed wooden beams. Born and raised TripAdvisor Chef Jason McLeod's Michelin-starred Born and Raised, in Little Italy is a fine-dining steakhouse that is open to much pomp in 2017. The service here is excellent, and the décor is retro elegant with a hipster edge - it's rich in woodwork, brown leather, green marble, muted lightning and unconventional art. The second open-air floor has two fireplaces and a bar lounge. The menu is thoroughly American - start with one of the imaginative appetizers. Entree options include steak in every possible style - tartare, ribeye, New York, Tomahawk, Wagyu, even vegan, and some are even prepared at the table. There's a solid list of wines and spirits, plus fancy desserts - try chocolate verrin. George's California Modern TripAdvisor In La Jolla, George's at the Cove is standard among San Diego restaurants. They're taking their Level is George's California Modern and its helpful staff. Fantastic for special special This is ocean-view dining at its best, with a spotlight on creative coastal cuisine. The dining room is contemporary with comfortable purple banquettes, and the food comes out nicely; plating here is an art form. Start with fish tacos or kale-maitake mushroom lasagna, then switch to Baja striped bass, smoked Jidori chicken or Niman Ranch roast pork loin. Finish things off with a fluffy, fancy strawberry cream dessert. Or just trust celebrated chef Trey Foshee for a four-course tasting menu with wine matching. Marine Room TripAdvisor Since 1941, La Jollina aptly named Marine Room delights San Diego restaurants with its fancy food and invincible views - during high tide waves spray windows, and during sunset the ambience is beyond fabulous. It's a classic special place for an occasion with elegant décor, old-fashioned service and a rich wine list. Chef Bernard Guillas' large menu includes dishes made from seasonal local ingredients; Specialties include sesame-coated ahi, pistachio fennel pollen seasoned swordfish, Amarané braised lamb ossobuco, and mandarin ginger-lacquered organic tofu. Addison TripAdvisor Addison at Fairmont Grand Del Mar first impresses with its elegant European castle-style décor, then very careful service, and finally French cuisine in the style of relais & Châteaux William Bradley resort, made with local ingredients. Its innovative tasting menus often make for decadent experience and change, but can contain Kumamoto oysters, mugs a la nage, mascarpone agnolotti, cuddled country egg or coffee-roasted canard; dessert can be lavender panna cotta with rhubarb.
